

About South Georgia and Falkland Islands/Malvinas trips

Both of these locations exude wildlife. On the Falklands, you will be able to visit black-browed albatross colonies and rockhopper penguin rookeries, whilst in South Georgia you will be blessed with king penguin colonies (up to 300,000 penguins). In South Georgia, you may also visit old whaling stations and the grave of “the Boss,” Sir Ernest Shackleton, who lies buried in the old cemetery of Grytviken.

Most of these trips visit Antarctica, but some itineraries visit only South Georgia and/or the Falkland Islands.

These trips range from 15 to 21 days, and some itineraries also cross the Antarctic Circle.

Important note

When choosing an Antarctic Expedition, options can be overwhelming. There are lots of operators running trips to Antarctica at the moment, each of them with their own trip names and descriptions. In our opinion, this results in great confusion at the time of booking.

We really want to help you understand the different options, in the easiest way possible.

Although there are variants, all trips can be filtered according to their objective into the following groups:

- 1 - Classic Antarctica
- 2 - Crossing the Circle
- 3 - Fly over the Drake
- 4 - South Georgia and Falkland Islands / Malvinas
- 5 - Weddell Sea

Regardless the voyage type, during transit days the expedition team will conduct mandatory briefings (safety, IAATO, etc.) but they will also run an educational program. Presentations on different topics such as ornithology, history, marine biology and geology, will be made by experts in those fields.

Except transit days (could be full or half days) there will be two excursions a day, weather permitting. One will be in the morning and the second in the afternoon. During lunch the ship will reposition to a new location.

The offer of optional activities such as camping, sea kayak, mountaineering, etc, depends on each different operator.

Except on some specific trips, there is never a fixed itinerary. We can tell you in which geographical region your voyage will take place, but we cannot tell you the specific locations that you will be visiting. Locations are subject to change in each individual voyage for various reasons such as weather and other ships in the area for example.

There is no best time to travel to Antarctica, each month of the austral spring and summer is different, and each has its particular charm.
